

We can turn these cameras off.

Towns across Wisconsin already have. Here is how Bayfield County does the same.

- 1 Get on the list
Add your name so we move as a group, not a crowd that scatters. A connected handful beats a hundred strangers.
- 2 Get the facts
Public-records requests to the Bayfield County Sheriff and WisDOT: who owns each camera, the cost, the contract dates, who gets the data.
- 3 Find the allies
Neighbors already spoke against this at the county board. We link up with them, the ACLU of Wisconsin, and EFF.
- 4 Build the pressure
A petition, an op-ed in the Ashland Daily Press, and a packed room when the contracts come up for renewal.
- 5 Outlast the cameras
We keep at it until they come down, and write the rules so they cannot quietly come back.

It is winnable.

Oshkosh, Dane County, Verona, and now the City of Ashland have dropped Flock. Bayfield County is next.
