

19 cameras. No vote. No contract. No rules.

Douglas County runs 19 license-plate cameras at nine locations around Superior, on a free trial the public never approved. Here is what the county's own records show.

NO CONTRACT, NO PAYMENT

19 Flock cameras at nine locations run on a free trial. No signed contract, no money paid, no grant secured. The county is applying for grant funds to pay for it.

NO WRITTEN POLICY

No written rules govern who can search the data or for what. Plate data defaults to 30-day retention, with no policy behind it.

NO PUBLIC PORTAL

Residents cannot see who searched their plate, when, or why. Neighboring Bayfield publishes a portal. Douglas has not.

YOUR PLATE LEAVES THE COUNTY

The county's own sharing list sends plate data to police in Texas (Fort Worth), Minnesota, Michigan, tribal agencies, and across Wisconsin. A plate logged in Superior can be searched from Fort Worth.

This is not about having something to hide. The county is seeking grant money to pay a private, out-of-state company to track everyone who drives through, with no rules and no way to opt out. Decide it in the open, before the county locks it in.

FIVE QUESTIONS THE COUNTY BOARD SHOULD ANSWER IN PUBLIC

- 1. Is out-of-state and national sharing on, and which agencies can search our cameras?
- 2. What is the data-retention period, in days, and is it in writing?
- 3. Who audits every search, and will the logs be public?
- 4. What is the full annual cost after the grant ends, the term, and the exit clause?
- 5. Will the county hold a public vote before turning this free trial into a paid contract?
