Plates are kept 30 days, then shared out. No public hearings were held.

~250 agencies in five states can search the data

Including out-of-state police and agencies you never voted for.

100,721 cars logged here in a single month

In a county of about 16,000 people. Zero public votes were taken.

"But I have nothing to hide."

A Kansas police lieutenant was charged with using one of these systems to stalk his estranged wife. In independent tests, as many as 1 in 10 reads come back wrong, and people have been pulled over at gunpoint over a misread plate. Sources: KWCH; Institute for Justice.

This is not left or right, and it is not anti-police. It is whether a private, out-of-state company gets to track a whole community, with no warrant and no public vote.
